

Raju Sir Says...

Sketch Courtesy : Deepa Lunawat

“
Recipe for professional trader - Homework on time, Ready with levels, Trade only on SIB zone, Execute like a Jedi, Neither bull nor bear.
”

- ➔ Universe is 5D, i.e. five dimensional in nature
- ➔ The source of Universe is infinite - ॐ (OM)
- ➔ The Quantum Energy in Universe flows from Higher order (Infinite) to lower order(finite). The greater shall dominate the lesser
- ➔ How much is too much
- ➔ The greedy shall dig his own grave and the meek shall inherit the earth
- ➔ Everything in nature is balanced, if there is Ying then there is Yang. Energy, numbers have to be balanced
- ➔ Time is universal and divine coming from the source of infinity and price is manmade therefore price is derivative of time
- ➔ Price and time are interchangeable. Time can lead to price and price can lead to time as they are fully compatible

A little bit of breathing space is required for a fish to turn around says David's law of nature Circa 13.01 page 49, para 3. When you place stop loss for a possible change of trend, you don't keep it tight initially. A fish requires a little bit of breathing space to turn around is my way of reminding myself. We need to trail conservatively because a fish goes for deep dive before going higher for a breath of fresh air.

Trading is simple but we make it complex because we are complex. Let your trading be like breathing, effortless. Please remember if we are not able to breathe effortlessly then there is something wrong, so is your trading if you are not be able to breathe effortlessly while trading.

Time is universal and governed by the laws of Universe, While Price is man-made. Time is non-linear multidimensional and curved. Price is linear and one dimensional. Time holds the key to life as well as trading.

A trend once formed follows Newton's law of motion. It would require an equally strong external force to change it. Trends are not formed easily and therefore cannot be changed easily.

Think of rise or fall as a nuclear reaction, Rise is nothing but a nuclear explosion and fall is a nuclear decay. Look at it that way, apply laws of nuclear physics and you would know when have you moved from growth to decay and vice-versa.

Neither bull nor bear changed my life. It's my second most important discovery after small is beautiful (SIB)- Small Stop-loss. Trade levels and not your beliefs is an extension of Neither bull nor bear (NBNB).

It's all about vibrations and cycles, sooner people understand, better it is.

Trading without SIB zone is a sure shot way to financial suicide. We would trade levels and not our beliefs. Money is made by trading low risk set ups and not by predicting tops and bottoms.

It's always about who is trapped in the market, once you decode that no one can stop you. The sooner you understand that this is a GAME and you need to assess which side is weaker and play accordingly.

I always look at trailing stop-loss and how far it is from current market price (CMP) to decide when it's going out of favour. Once it's so far and wide then you know that a reversal is around the corner.

All the big moves would come out of a price confluence zone.

Past = Present = Future by a relationship.

We are professionals, we are in the business of managing risks, profits are incidental.

Being nimble is one of the most primary requirements of a trader, Neither bull nor bear is another, Let the trade come to you is another, We can't make money on borrowed conviction is another one.

It's important to LOOK at market structure PSYCHOLOGICALLY rather than MECHANICALLY. What I usually find is that most traders are obsessed with creating just a mechanical system and missing out on finer nuances around the turn around zones. You need to create a mechanism with some mechanical inputs and a dash of psychological inputs. Successful Trading is an art of mixing the TWO aspects.

